

International Workshop

International Relations, Economic Development and Human Security in East and Southeast Asia

12 October 2012
Overseas Chinese University
Taichung, Taiwan

Call for Papers and Panels

In the 1990s, the UN and several leading nations emphasised the importance of human development and security in the global attempt to maintain peace and security. More recently, the 'War on Terror', global economic decline and China's rise as an economic, political and military power have had adverse effects on democratic development in all parts of the world. Papers presented at this workshop should deal with the triangular relationship between international relations, economic development and human security in East and Southeast Asia. This workshop will be an effort to explore the possibilities for improving human security in light of the current overriding global focus on economic development (econophilia).

31 July 2012:           Receipt of abstract and title
1 October 2012:       Receipt of final draft papers
8 October 2012:       Receipt of PowerPoint files

Contact email:       Workshop2012@APISA.org

Please refer to our website for updated information:

www.APISA.org